Veil is lifted on forced marriages

Ontario study. 219 reported cases in 3 years cut across lines of culture, nationality

A groundbreaking three-year study of forced marriage in Ontario has found more than 200 women who were wed against their will, a practice the report's authors say highlights serious gaps in services.

The first-of-its-kind report, being released at a Toronto news conference Friday, was conducted by the South Asian Legal Clinic of Ontario, which questioned 30 social service agencies about the practice.

It found 219 reported cases between 2010 and 2012, with 97 per cent of the victims being women. The survey found the majority of victims, 81 per cent, were between 16 and 34 years old.

The report found that parents, siblings, extended family, grandparents and religious leaders were all involved in pushing individuals into forced marriage. The reasons were mostly cultural (66 per cent), but honour, money and immigration purposes were also behind some forced marriages.

The report also calls for better training for teachers, guidance counsellors, health professionals and police, and for including forced marriage in the definition of "family violence" when an applicant seeks priority in getting subsidized housing.

Many victims forced into marriage experienced some form of violence, including threats (68 per cent), physical violence (59 per cent), sexual violence (26 per cent) and stalking (20 per cent), the report said.

"The results we got back show that this is an issue across a number of communities in Ontario," says Shalini Konanur, executive director and lawyer at the South Asian Legal Clinic.

The largest number of forced marriages was within the Muslim community with 103 victims from more than 30 countries of origin, including Afghanistan, Palestine, Senegal, Swaziland, Turkey and the United Kingdom, as well as Canada. Forty-four were Hindu, 30 were Sikh and 12 Christian.

"It's prevalent everywhere," said Sandeep Chand, an outspoken advocate for spreading awareness about forced marriage. "It's not just a South Asian issue. "It's a global issue; it's a human rights issue."

U of T students trade cash for seats in full classes

Education? No rules to prevent students from buying and selling scarce spots in packed courses

University of Toronto students desperate for scarce seats in fully booked classrooms are offering cash to classmates willing to give up a spot, turning registration into a bidding war.

"$100 to whomever drops (History of Modern Espionage)," posted Christopher Grossi on Facebook Tuesday. "I really need this course."

The third-year history student said the 180-person course filled up before his designated registration time. After talking to the professor without success, he said offering money was his last chance to coax someone to trade with him.

The university's course registration system prioritizes students based on need and creates a wait list for full classes, said Glenn Loney, assistant dean and faculty registrar of the university's faculty of arts and science.

Quoted

"Once the university drops the wait list, it's mostly just every man for themselves."

Student Christopher Grossi

But there is a narrow window of opportunity in the days after the wait list closes and before the final deadline for students to add or drop courses.

"Once the university drops the wait list, it's mostly just every man for themselves," Grossi said.

Some students have taken to Facebook to name a price for their coveted seat. In a post earlier this week, one student offered to sell her spots in two psychology courses for $50 apiece — or she'll swap for a space in another psychology class.

Third-year computer science student "Lee," who would not give his full name for fear of repercussions by the university, said he has sold his spot in courses twice, for $20 each.

Munib Sajjad, the president of U of T's student union, said students frequently face problems with the university's registration system and can't get into the courses they need.

"Students will probably try to do everything just to pursue an education," he said.

However, Loney said ultimately the university can only offer so many spots.

"We're doing our best with these limited resources to make sure students get what they need," he said.

Ford mum on Price's future

Mayor Rob Ford is refusing to answer questions about the future of David Price, a top aide at the centre of a probe into several incidents of abusive behaviour at Georgetown GO station.

"It's actually no one's business what happens in my office," Ford said in response to questions from media Thursday afternoon about whether Price should remain as the mayor's director of logistics and operations — a job that comes with an estimated $130,000 annual salary. "I take care of the people that work for me and they do a great job, as you see."

On Thursday, Torstar News Service revealed that Metrolinx, the GTA's regional transit authority, had received complaints about Price acting in an abusive manner at Georgetown GO station on several occasions dating as far back as November.

Mayor Rob Ford

TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

The most recent incident occurred on Aug. 27, in which Price, after missing the 7:41 a.m. train to Union Station, swore at a Metrolinx employee and broke one of the station's main doors, transit officials said.

Station security cameras and a witness caught the incident on video. Torstar has viewed the video taken by the witness. Metrolinx is conducting an investigation and will share its results with Halton Regional Police, who will help determine if charges should be laid.

Price did not respond to several calls and emails from Torstar between Tuesday and Thursday this week. Torstar left messages for the mayor's chief of staff inquiring whether Price was still employed, but did not hear back.

Vaughan. Listeria found at daycare where toddler died

Public health inspectors found listeria — potentially deadly bacteria — in a chicken stew, cooked grains and deli meats at an illegal Vaughan home daycare where a toddler died in July.

Inspectors also found garbage with dirty diapers in the kitchen; expired or rotting food in the fridge and freezer; unsanitized toys; evidence of inadequate hand washing or dishwashing capacity, and other sanitation concerns in the home at 343 Yellowood Circle, according to the inspection report obtained under a Freedom of Information request.

Police noted that 14 dogs and nine children were found in a house next door to the unregulated home daycare where 2-year-old Eva Ravikovich died July 8, according to notes by York Region Public Health inspector Cameron Weighill.

At least 35 children were registered at the daycare by the operator, who appeared to be caring for them in the two homes, York public health officials have said.

The coroner has not yet determined a cause of death in the troubling case.

Ship sunk in 1890 found

Subterranean explorers. About 8,000 ships have been wrecked in the Great Lakes over the years, 800 of them in Lake Ontario

The lake was angry that day in 1890. Great, four-metre waves whipped up and lashed a schooner being captained by Thomas Brokenshire just 20 kilometres from port on Lake Ontario.

The following day, ships reported nothing but debris. The Ocean Wave had capsized, its lifeboat still attached, its cargo of hemlock lumber floating away, and no sign of the stern. No one survived and nothing was worth salvaging.

But the wreck refused to sink. It drifted for at least 10 days before finally plunging to the depths, making its exact whereabouts difficult to pin down. Until this summer, that is, when explorers finally found the wreck near Oswego, N.Y.

Last Saturday, the three explorers met with Brokenshire's great-grandson. And that's where Jim Kennard, Roger Pawlowski and Chip Stevens found another treasure: a letter Brokenshire's kin, Richard Nereau, 77, brought along with him. "This is the last trip Martin and I are going to make," Brokenshire had written to his wife. "We have good freight on this lumber and we'll pick up a load of coal in Oswego and go home with it to Cobourg and settle down ashore for the rest of our lives." TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Motorcycle parking. Free ride for free riders over?

Management consultant Rob Oddi bought his Vespa in 2009 to cut down on transportation costs and to make it easier to get around Toronto's clogged streets.

"I purchased it because there was free parking, and I was able to park on sidewalks," Oddi said Thursday.

He's annoyed to hear that city transportation staff have recommended ending free parking at meters and machines, a perk motorcyclists and scooter riders have enjoyed since 2005.

The proposal is on Friday's public works and infrastructure committee agenda.

"This is a bad move," Oddi said. "They should be encouraging, not discouraging, alternatives to cars."

Requiring motorcycles to pay between 25 and 50 per cent of the hourly rate for full-sized vehicles — in newly designated motorcycle parking areas — would generate up to $250,000 per year, says a staff report signed by Stephen Buckley, general manager of transportation services. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Leading figure in Toronto's response to SARS dies at 68

One of the key figures in Canada's battle against SARS has died.

Dr. Donald Low, who became a trusted face and voice of the response effort, died Wednesday. Low, 68, was diagnosed with a brain tumour earlier this year.

A native of Winnipeg, Low was credited by friends and colleagues for both his contribution to the SARS response and for advancing the practice of microbiology and infectious diseases across Canada.

He had a keen mind and loved to puzzle out intriguing new developments in infectious diseases. Over the course of his career he co-authored nearly 400 peer-reviewed articles for scientific journals, 41 book chapters and almost 100 invited articles.

Low was a global expert in flesh-eating disease and a passionate champion of the need to combat antibiotic resistance by prudent use of the drugs. THE CANADIAN PRESS

GTA immigration detainees protest 'unfair treatment'

Hunger strike.
Inmates relocated to Lindsay, Ont., isolated from family, lawyers

GTA immigration detainees recently transferred to a jail in Lindsay, Ont., held a protest and staged a hunger strike this week over what they describe as unfair treatment.

About 200 inmates being held in Greater Toronto have been relocated to the Central East Correctional Centre since August because of a coming closure of the Toronto West Detention Centre, a move critics say isolates the detainees and keeps them from receiving help and support.

The detainees staged the protest at 11 a.m., Tuesday, according to a memo from the Lindsay facility's administration to the Canada Border Service Agency. Negotiators were brought in and the inmates returned to their cells at 10 p.m.

Some have been on a hunger strike since Wednesday.

"Basically, they were upset they had no access to anything; their family, legal counsel or any recreational program," said a source who was informed about the situation.

The detainees, deemed a flight risk while awaiting deportation, have complained about not being able to make phone calls to lawyers and families, frequent lockdowns due to short staff, and disregard of their dietary needs.

"We have had a hard time communicating with our clients," said Toronto immigration lawyer Guidy Mamann, who has had about two dozen clients transferred to Lindsay.

"More than 45 per cent of the immigration (files) are in Greater Toronto, and Lindsay is two hours from the city. The whole thing just makes no sense. It is a crazy situation."

The border service agency did not respond to Torstar News Service's request for comment.

Ford Fest robocalls

Why should the 416 have all the fun with the Fords?

Ford Fest is not just for Toronto residents anymore.

As the season's most anticipated opportunity to rub shoulders with Mayor Rob Ford moves out of his mother's backyard and into Centennial Park, the invitation is being extended beyond the 416.

Residents in Mississauga and Vaughan say they were surprised to receive a robocall from the city's chief magistrate earlier this week, inviting them to partake in his family's annual barbecue, scheduled for Friday at 6 p.m.

According to Coun. Doug Ford, expanding the robocalling blitz to the 905 was no accident.

The mayor's brother said his family decided to include a few Mississauga postal codes this year because Centennial Park sits just outside the boundaries of the GTA city — and "Ford Nation is not just the 416."

Greatest Dane one for the record book

Guinness. Massive pooch recognized as world's tallest female dog

When you've got the world's tallest female dog walking around your house, your kitchen counters are uncluttered — otherwise one sweep of the tail from a body that stands 98 cm tall at the shoulders can clean them.

The top of the fridge is a storage "safe zone" for Ontario residents Cathy and David Payne, whose five-year-old grey and black, 214-pound Great Dane, Morgan, has been officially entered into the Guinness World Records book. The 2014 edition has just been released.

The couple, who run a garden centre from property in Melbourne, Ont., where mild-mannered Morgan is a genial greeter, decided to apply to Guinness last year.

Quoted

"It's the coolest thing to look in the book and see all our names there and to know that we have the tallest female dog in the world." Owner Cathy Payne

The Paynes' online research showed that Morgan's size was unusual even for a Great Dane — and possibly record-breaking. The previous record holder for tallest female dog is Bella, a Great Dane in Arizona who stands 94 cm tall. The Paynes were officially informed in April that Morgan had made the record book.

Showbiz lobby goes after search engines in piracy battle

Illegal downloads.
Industry trying to drum up support for its cause among lawmakers in Washington

The music and movie industries are sounding the alarm again on online piracy, saying illegal downloads are on the rise and search engines like Google aren't doing enough to stop them.

Entertainment executives say they have no intention of trying to revive failed U.S. legislation that would have imposed unprecedented regulations on Internet companies. That proposal last year prompted a fierce backlash from tech companies and activists who said it would damage the Internet as a free and open enterprise.

But the industry's top lobbyists returned to Capitol Hill this week to try to renew interest in online piracy. They are distributing to sympathetic lawmakers their own research on what they say are the growing perils of piracy — some of which is contested by Internet activists — and telling Congress that Google and other search engines aren't doing enough to redirect consumers away from known pirating sites.

The suggestion was that private talks between entertainment executives and Google on anti-piracy efforts had failed to produce a solution, prompting two lobbying giants to make their case instead in news conferences and hearing rooms on Capitol Hill on Wednesday, while Google declined to comment. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

By the numbers

- A study released this week by a London-based digital brand monitoring company called NetNames found that illegal content available on the Internet jumped some 159 per cent from 2010 to 2012.
- Analysts came to that conclusion by reviewing the top 12,500 files out of 3.5 million on a public BitTorrent network to determine how many of them were legal. After omitting pornographic files, the group determined that 99.97 per cent of files shared using the popular peer-to-peer protocol were illegal.

Drake performs at the MTV Video Music Awards in August. The Toronto rapper's single The Motto was stolen the most, driving 458,038 downloads during a six-month period tracked by industry researchers, making Drake the most illegally shared artist in the United States. Families mourn their loved ones

Bus-train crash victims.
Cause of collision that killed six at Ottawa rail crossing still in question

Metro in Ottawa

Ottawa police released the names and ages of all six victims in Wednesday's crash between an OC Transpo double decker bus and a VIA Rail train in Barrhaven.

Numerous agencies and people in the community have been moved to express condolences to the families of the victims, and some families communicated statements about their loss through the Ottawa Police.

Friends Connor Boyd and Kyle Nash both attended John McRae Secondary School before moving on to study at Carleton University.

Boyd's friend Kayla Bennett wrote on her Facebook page: "Connor Boyd you were such an amazing person. I have known you since elementary school. Everyone knows you by your laugh or how you knew everything about everything!! I can't believe you are gone!! ... you will be missed."

On Thursday police released a series of statements from grieving families, including Kyle Nash's: "The family of Kyle Nash are devastated by his tragic and premature death. He was deeply loved. They thank everyone for their support and ask for privacy to grieve at this time."

A statement issued on behalf of Karen Krzyzewski's family reads: "We are very saddened by the loss of Karen. She was a gentle spirit who was caring and compassionate to others. She loved life to the fullest. Karen was the mother of two young adult children. She is survived by her parents and a brother and two sisters. She will be mourned by family and many friends. Karen worked happily for 28 years at the Library and Archives Canada. She believed that libraries were an important part of Canadian culture ..."

No family statements were released through police concerning the final two crash victims; Rob More, 35, and Michael Bleakney, 57. Bleakney's Google Plus and LinkedIn profiles listed him as a geotechnical engineer at Public Works and Government Services Canada.

Grieving wife

Terry Woodard, whose husband, David Woodard, 46, was driving the bus Wednesday, spoke with AM 640's John Oakley about the incident and about what her husband was like.

- "David was in good health. He didn't fall asleep at the wheel. He's always rested the night before he goes to work. I don't know what to say. Either he didn't see the lights or the barricade wasn't down just in time," she said.
- On Facebook, she wrote: "Ok...Today I lost my HUSBAND the love of my LIFE my best friend the father of my daughter and a great step DAD to the boys...I don't know what to say...I want him back so much...MISS you BABY... be always in my prayers in my mind, but most of all in my heart....life is not the same without you here..."

Last goodbye

"Today I lost my HUSBAND the love of my LIFE my best friend the father of my daughter and a great step DAD to the boys."

TTC SUBSIDY MUST RISE TO KEEP UP WITH RIDERSHIP

ANDY BYFORD
CEO
TORONTO TRANSIT COMMISSION

This month, the TTC will carry its 29 billionth rider since its inception in 1921.

At the TTC, we are very proud of this milestone and of the fact that we are carrying record numbers each and every day – 1.7 million rides and rising. Our annual ridership has just surpassed 521 million (already topping last year's record total) and as Toronto grows, that figure will rise to a predicted 540 million trips by the end of next year.

With rising ridership, however, comes increased cost as we work to keep up with demand. More riders mean we need to add service, and that in turn means more vehicles, more operators, expanded garage space, and higher maintenance and fuel costs.

For the past two years, the TTC's subsidy has been frozen while ridership has grown. This equates to a decrease in subsidy per rider of 16 per cent to a figure that is the lowest of any major North American or European transit system.

The TTC has found efficiencies within the organization to allow it to keep pace with service demand while focusing more clearly on basic customer care. We will continue to look for efficiencies, but a third successive year of a subsidy decrease is simply not tenable.

In this year's budget negotiations with the City, I will make a strong argument for an increase to our subsidy that will enable us to maintain your service and also limit any fare increase to the rate of inflation.

Effective public transit benefits everyone. It is time to restore sustainable funding to keep Toronto moving.

AskTTC

Dear TTC,
I've been trying to figure this one out for years. Why do the trains go so slowly between Eglinton and Davisville and Davisville and St Clair, both southbound and northbound?
Marlene

Marlene,
Track ballast, as it's called, is typically comprised of crushed stone and provides the trackbed foundation. Packed below and around railroad ties, it supports the load from the track, while facilitating the drainage of water. Over time, ballast will wear and like any aging infrastructure, it needs to be replaced.

The existing ballast between St Clair and Eglinton Stations is now 60 years old and is listed as a priority track improvement within our state-of-good-repair program. With ballast replacement requiring the suspension of subway service, significant planning is well under way to minimize the impact on customers.

In the meantime, trains travel through the area at a reduced speed. While we are keen on providing fast, reliable service, safety is always our number one priority. Once we have a firm timeline – dates and how long the work will take – we'll be fully communicating that information to you and all of our valued customers.

INSIDE THE TTC'S CUSTOMER INFORMATION CENTRE

On a busy day, each representative at the TTC's Customer Information Centre can field over 100 calls, ranging from lost articles to the best way to get from Point A to Point B. With operator-assisted service available from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. (except statutory holidays) and recorded information available 24 hours daily, TTC staff provide important information to customers travelling on the TTC and beyond.

During one call, a customer asks how to travel from Toronto to a location in Mississauga. Immediately, staff work to identify the quickest route to Islington Station – a connecting point to Mississauga Transit. After relaying the instructions, they politely transfer the customer's call to representatives at Mississauga Transit, to ensure they have all the information they need to complete their journey.

While the TTC has expanded its customer outreach, providing service advisories through e-Alerts, Twitter, Onestop platform screens and our website, the reassuring voice of a live operator remains a valuable asset. Providing service in over 70 languages, including a TTY Hearing Impaired Service (offered daily from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m., except statutory holidays), the TTC takes pride in assisting all customers who travel on our system.

To contact the TTC's Customer Information Centre call 416-393-4636 (INFO).

Pope warns church must find balance

Vatican City. The Pope's progressive vision contrasts with predecessors John Paul II and Benedict XVI.

Pope Francis has warned that the Catholic Church's moral structure might "fall like a house of cards" if it doesn't balance its divisive rules about abortion, gays and contraception with the greater need to make it a merciful, more welcoming place for all.

Six months into his papacy, Francis set out his vision for the church and his priorities as pope in a lengthy and remarkably blunt interview with La Civilta Cattolica, the Italian Jesuit magazine. It was published Thursday.

A renewed vision

"The church sometimes has locked itself up in small things, in small-minded rules."

Pope Francis
In an interview with La Civilta Cattolica, the Italian Jesuit magazine.

In the article, Francis expands on his groundbreaking comments over the summer about gays and acknowledges some of his own faults. He sheds light on his favourite composers, artists, authors and films (Mozart, Caravaggio, Dostoevsky and Fellini's La Strada) and says he prays even while at the dentist's office. Valdai, Russia. No gay discrimination, but hetero is better: Putin

President Vladimir Putin denied Thursday that gays face discrimination in Russia, saying a new law that has drawn protests worldwide does not infringe on their rights.

Putin maintained the law bans only "propaganda of nontraditional sexual relations among minors."

The Russian law has prompted calls for boycotts of the 2014 Winter Olympics hosted by Russia in Sochi.

Putin said while some European nations have allowed gay marriages, "the Europeans are dying out ... and gay marriages don't produce children."

The new Russian law imposes fines for individuals and organizations. Foreigners could face prison sentences of up to 15 days.

Mudslide buries Mexican village

Acapulco. Tropical storm ravages nation, destroying 35,000 homes and killing at least 97 people

A mass of dirt, rock and mud swept down the hillside in the remote mountain village of La Pintada, burying half the hamlet and leaving 58 people missing on Monday afternoon, Mexico's Independence Day.

Nancy Gomez, 21, said she heard a strange sound and went to look out the doorway of her family's house, her one-year-old baby clutched in her arms. She saw the ground move, then felt a jolt from behind as her father tried to push her to safety.

Trapped

"I screamed a lot, for them to come rescue me, but I never heard anything from my mother or father or my cousin."

Nancy Gomez, who was buried in the mud with her one-year-old baby

When the rain-soaked hillside gave way, it swept up Gomez in a wave of dirt that covered her entirely, leaving only a small air pocket between her and her baby.

Eventually, relatives came from a nearby house and dug her out.

She never saw her father again.

The 58 missing from La Pintada were not yet included in the official national death toll of 97 caused by the storm.

Apology. Coca-Cola cancels promotion that produced 'retard' cap

Coca-Cola issued a written apology Thursday to the Alberta family that found a vitamin water cap bearing the words "you retard" as part of a promotion the company has now cancelled.

"This word should not have been included due to the English connotations and we have taken action," David Thomson, vice-president of still beverages for Coca-Cola Canada, wrote in a Sept. 19 letter to Doug Loates. "This includes cancelling the promotion, stopping production of bottles with these caps and destroying any remaining caps within our inventory."

The nationwide promotion saw a random English word followed by a random French word written on the inside of bottle caps. "Retard" had made the list of appropriate French words, as the context was intended to mean "late."

The French word "douche," meaning shower, was also the subject of a separate complaint.

Doug Loates, the father of Blake Loates, an Edmonton woman who brought the bottle cap to light earlier this week, said he was satisfied with the response from Coca-Cola and is happy with the action the company has taken to rectify the situation.

"I think they were caught off guard by this as it was a big oversight on their part," he said. "I am happy with the results and I have to believe this was an accident."

Filipinos line up for food

Evacuees line up to receive food rations as fighting between government forces and Muslim rebels continues on Thursday in Zamboanga city in the Philippines. 'Racially offensive'. Ottawa football team to drop Redskins name, logo

After more than a year of pressure from Ottawa-area Ojibway musician Ian Campeau, the Nepean Redskins football team is poised to drop its name and logo in favour of a new one.

"As a community sport organization, the Club aims to provide a healthy and positive environment for the youth in our programs, encourage sportsmanship at all levels of play and instill a sense of pride and support for our community both on and off the field," Steve Dean, president of the Nepean Redskins Football Club said in a press released issued Thursday.

According to the release, the transition is predicted to cost in excess of $100,000 and may take a number of years.

Campeau, also known as DJ NDN in Ottawa electronic-music group A Tribe Called Red, argued Redskins is "racially offensive" and needs to change. He launched a social-media campaign last year aimed at convincing the team's president to drop the name. It fizzled months later, but was reignited this summer.

Canada's classical vocal quartet The Tenors taught four-part harmony in rural Kenya recently, coaching high-achieving girls at Free the Children's Kisaruni Girls High School how to belt out a tune. And not just any tune, but the Leonard Cohen classic Hallelujah.

- Remigio Pereira, Victor Micallef, Fraser Walters and Clifton Murray divided the 80 eager girls into four groups and each Tenor taught his part of the song to his group. They then came together to sing as one powerful voice.
- Murray spoke of how inspiring it was to "share the international language of music with girls who have faced their share of hardship." But through education, and a song in their hearts, he said, they are tomorrow's leaders.

Certain life lessons are universal: "Treat others how you want to be treated"; "Everything happens for a reason"; "Don't put aluminum foil in the microwave."

Then there are moments of personal triumph or tragedy that come with unforeseen life lessons. One such moment found me halfway up Mount Kilimanjaro, in Tanzania.

About 2,500 metres into our 5,895-metre Kilimanjaro climb, I felt like I'd been hit by a truck. After four consecutive days of waking with the sun to trek through challenging climates, we'd reached the alpine desert — scorching heat and arctic chill — and Africa's tallest peak had taken its toll. Up to this point I'd been climbing on my hands. My shoulders, elbows and wrists were waging war with my body, begging me to stop. My best friends, David and Alex, would have to carry me in an apparatus that had been custom-built for the occasion of my defeat. The mountain had won.

Summit day

David and Alex were in rough shape, having lost the contents of their stomachs to altitude sickness. Physically, I felt fine. I guess being 2'7" finally paid off.

Spencer West, on the lessons he learned climbing Kilimanjaro without legs

Then came summit day. David and Alex were in rough shape, having lost the contents of their stomachs to altitude sickness. Physically, I felt fine. I guess being 2'7" finally paid off.

Mentally, I was struggling with something I'll never forget. For the first time in my life I wished I had legs, not for my sake, but because I wanted to be able to carry my friends like they had carried me.

Evidently, my fairy godmother had the day off. Instead, I did the only thing I could do. I spoke from the heart, expressing words of encouragement the entire way to the top to keep their spirits up and their minds distracted from the gruelling monotony of putting one foot in front of the other.

I became the best damn cheerleader that mountain had ever seen. And I carried them, emotionally speaking.

The lesson? Always exercise in oxygen-rich environments.

No, really, it's this: I didn't fail for being carried; I succeeded when I asked for help, and then I returned the favour.

Nobody achieves anything exceptional on their own. I learned the importance of having others who believe in you.

For 57 million children around the world who are denied access to education, the ability to read, write and receive formal job training are lost.

But those children might also be denied moments of sudden, unexpected inspiration that come from the encouragement of their peers, life lessons they would have learned from exposure to alternative perspectives, and mentorship opportunities from teachers. An entire ecosystem of support is also lost.

For me, part of being educated means having the confidence to believe in yourself and the humility to ask for help. It's the ability to recognize teachable moments and extract moral lessons.

Education is the implicit knowledge that somebody believes in you, will celebrate your successes and shoulder your mistakes. Education is mentorship; it's the confidence that teachers instil in students so that when students graduate, they no longer need their teachers. Education is sustainability. We are in danger of losing this social capital, and 57 million life lessons.

SPENCER WEST/FOR METRO

Hey kid, what's the most important thing you've ever learned in school?

"I think it's art. We make dinosaurs out of clay."

Zipora Logan, junior kindergarten

"Respect. Because all the children will be respecting you too."

Crystarbell Okunseyien, Grade 3

"Well, I learned everything.... Gym.... Basketball!"

Kemson Edward, senior kindergarten

"I really like learning math and I think it's really useful. I think I can apply it to a lot of things."

Beatrice Cameron, Grade 5

"I did lessons on the calendar. (It's important because) you have to listen."

Mary Pasqualino, junior kindergarten

Learning comes in many forms, whether it's the formal education of schooling or the lessons gleaned from volunteer work. Here are a few stories of how Free the Children is impacting people's educations:

Single mom at 12, Rahab Sopiato leaves her charcoal-making days behind for a new career

Rahab Sopiato, 40, gave birth to the first of three children when she was just 12. She bursts out laughing when asked what happened to the father, but makes it clear that he didn't stick around, so she scratched out a living making charcoal.

It was gruelling, hopeless work in the Maasai community of Kajiado, located a three-day walk south of Nairobi in Kenya's Rift Valley.

To make charcoal, Sopiato scavenged branches and chopped them into pieces. Then she covered the pile in leaves and set it alight, before burying it in dirt. The heap smouldered. In three days' time, she had charcoal briquettes, enough to fill one sack.

The market was three hours away, so she borrowed a neighbour's donkey to get there. If she was lucky, she sold the sack for 100 Kenyan shillings, enough to buy corn flour to make a thin porridge for her children. If she wasn't, she returned home with the sack but no food for dinner.

She repeated the process of making charcoal and trudging to market for three decades. She says she was very thin and sickly; so were her children. She couldn't afford to send her eldest daughter to high school, which in Kenya can cost the equivalent of $350 Canadian a year.

A high school education in Kenya is thought to be the golden ticket to a better life. She hated that she couldn't provide that.

Then two years ago, Sopiato heard about Me to We Artisans, which paid Mamas like her a fair wage for their beaded handi-work, which was designed for a Western market and sold around the world. Me to We Artisans donates half of its profits to Free The Children, and uses the other half to grow the business.

Sopiato makes bracelets, necklaces and earrings. This fall, she focuses on "ABC Education Rafiki Friend Chains." Each one sold buys school supplies for One Child for One Year. Fingers flying, she makes about 40 a day.

With the money she has so far earned, she was able to finally send her eldest daughter to secondary school. At 29, she just graduated. Sopiato happily talks about what she did with her first few paycheques from Me to We Artisans.

She bought two cows so her family had milk. Then she set up a small shop that sells sugar, soda, flour, rice, potatoes and sweets.

While she waits for customers, she beads.

And at night, Rahab sits on the comfortable cushioned seats she bought, in her newly painted house, and watches her small TV.

After many years of unrelenting hard work, she relaxes. She pats her ample stomach and thick thighs and says the extra pounds she has gained are another tangible sign of her good fortune.

She hopes to never make another charcoal briquette in her life. She also hopes that her children, well educated and well on their way, will support her as she grows old.

Local, global do-gooders flood ACC today

Thousands of young people who've helped to make the world a better place are ready to fill the Air Canada Centre on Friday for Free the Children's annual We Day celebration. Youth who have made one positive local action and one positive global action are eligible to attend We Day.

This year, speakers at the Toronto We Day will include Cmdr. Chris Hadfield, Lt.-Gov. David Onley, Premier Kathleen Wynne, Martin Luther King III and Argo Mike (Pinball) Clemons.

There will be musical performances by Demi Lovato, the Jonas Brothers, the Barenaked Ladies, Austin Mahone, Serena Ryder and the Kenyan Boys Choir, who sang at the 2009 inauguration of U.S. President Barack Obama.

Glee actor Darren Criss will host.

There will be nine We Days across Canada this school year, plus two in the United States. The first U.K. We Day will happen in London next spring. This calendar year, 160,000 students and teachers from 4,000 schools will be attending.

According to Free the Children, We Day inspires youth to do good. Their research shows 98 per cent of youth We Day participants said after the event that they felt they could make a difference, 80 per cent of We Day alumni reported volunteering more than 150 hours each year and 79 per cent of We Day alumni who've reached voting age by the last national election had voted. JESSICA SMITH/METRO

Education helps you manifest your destiny, Maasai man teaches suburban teen

It was the summer of 2011, and I was 16 years old when my outlook on life took a turn.

I found myself in Kenya for three weeks with Free the Children, and our mission was simple: help build a school for the children who lived in the rural region of the Maasai Mara.

Our Maasai guide, whose English name was Steven, caught me alone with my thoughts as the sun set. What began as an earnest conversation about our respective lives turned into an image I've carried with me ever since.

Steven told me that life is a lottery; a game of chance. The situation a person is born into is a matter of luck, and destiny has nothing to do with it.

Steven talked about the control we must exert over our lives and that destiny plays no part in the outcome. His dream was to get an education, so he could become more than a cattle herder — the traditional role of a Maasai man. The point: Whether it is rural Kenya or the suburbs of Toronto, an education opens us up to a larger world than the one we were born into.

And that gives us the power to choose the life we want to lead. My conversation with Steven left me with many thoughts, but one prevailing theme: Although where we find ourselves at birth may be a matter of chance, an education puts us on our life's path.

Gratitude learned through carrying water

It usually happens when I turn on the tap. As the water comes out, so do memories of my three overseas trips with Me to We.

This year was Ghana. I was there to help build a school. It was amazing to watch mothers and women of the Assemkow community continuously walk back and forth with huge pans of water on their heads.

I tried carrying just a small one and it was so difficult. I don't know how they do it so easily, let alone with no hands. To think that the water they are carrying is not even clean really got to me. They go through all this work to have access to dirty water for drinking, bathing and doing laundry, yet back at home I simply turn on the tap and clean water comes rushing out.

It was actually too much water that created a challenge in Assemkow. Free the Children already had two buildings up. The community already had two kindergarten classes, but they were not running because a storm had ripped off the roof of the building, so they had no choice but to shut it down. We helped get that roof up and the school running in no time, but it was mostly the community that made it happen.

I am now more cautious about everything I do and waste as little as possible. Overall, the trip has inspired me to save water and to be way more grateful with all I have.

‘Education breaks the cycle of poverty’: Kenyan man becomes the first in his family to attend university

The aspirations of many boys are carried on the slight shoulders of 22-year-old Bernard Rotich. So when he qualified for university, the people of his remote community in rural Kenya pooled their resources to pay his tuition.

He is now in his third year at Nairobi University studying to be a high school teacher while taking accounting courses on the side.

A member of the pastoral Kipsigis people, Rotich comes from a family of farmers.

Growing up in Emori Joi, located in Kenya’s Rift Valley, Rotich’s first school was overcrowded and mud-walled. Then Free the Children rebuilt Emori Joi Primary School with brick and tin. Rotich attended this school in Grade 8 before earning his way to high school, which in Kenya requires an entrance exam and payment of school fees. In high school, he finished second in a class of 60 in the national exam.

“I believe education breaks the cycle of poverty,” he says. “Since Free the Children came, we have transformed ourselves, our community.”

The school now has nine classrooms, a kitchen and a library. More than 530 children attend the school. Families from the community have formed a group that pays the administrative fee for exams and the yearly fees to attend high school and university. Based on the merry-go-round model introduced by Free the Children, struggling families get a generous sum of money from a pot to use to improve their livelihoods.

Rotich says six other students, a mix of boys and girls, have graduated from university, while another 13 are currently attending.

Once he attains his degree, Rotich hopes to return to his community to teach.

He was inspired to become a teacher by the teachers who encouraged him. But he is also taking business classes so he can have as many options as possible.

“I want a very flexible career. I know I am a role model to many.”

Spain. Baby dies on baggage conveyor belt

A five-month-old baby boy has died in an accident after being placed on a baggage conveyor belt at an airport in southeast Spain, local authorities said Thursday.

A spokeswoman for the Alicante airport management company Aena said the baby and his American mother arrived at the airport late Wednesday on a flight from London.

The baby's father, a Canadian, was waiting for them at the airport's arrivals zone when the incident happened.

A Guardia Civil spokesman told British newspaper The Independent that the investigation is still in the early stages and they are looking at CCTV footage, but it seems that it was an accident.

"The mother left the baby on the conveyor belt, which can be activated by detecting weight or by an airport employee," the spokesman said.

"It seems that the baby carrier's weight activated the belt and the child was trapped in the rollers in the drop zone."

Despite attempts to resuscitate the baby, he was pronounced dead at the scene.

Media reports said the family were in Spain for a holiday. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Canadians held at gunpoint aboard Greenpeace ship

Tensions have been flaring between Greenpeace and Russian Coast Guard officers for some time, says Arctic campaign co-ordinator Christy Ferguson. Here, an activist is seen Wednesday attempting to climb an oil platform operated by energy giant Gazprom. DENIS SINYAKOV/GREENPEACE/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Arctic Campaign foiled. Members of the Russian Coast Guard rappelled on board and took control of the vessel

Two Canadian activists are among a group of 25 people who were being held at gunpoint aboard a Greenpeace ship, the environmental group said Thursday.

Arctic Campaign Co-ordinator Christy Ferguson said Paul Ruzycki of Port Colborne, Ont., and a man from Montreal whose name was not released were arrested when Russian coast guard officers boarded their vessel, which Greenpeace says was in international waters.

Ferguson said at least 15 members of the coast guard used helicopters and ropes to rappel on board the Arctic Sunrise, a Greenpeace ship carrying a crew bent on protesting offshore oil drilling in the Arctic. The crew was being held in the ship's mess, she said, adding no injuries have been reported.

The incident took place Thursday as the ship was circling an oil platform in the Pechora Sea, an arm of the Barents Sea. The platform was owned by Gazprom, a Russian oil company.

Ferguson decried the incident, saying Russian authorities had no jurisdiction over a ship that was sailing in international waters and had no need to resort to threatening tactics. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Need some stylish body armour?

Light, yet protective. Metro meets a Colombian who sells his armour to politicians, lawyers and celebrities

LESLIE AGUIRRE
Metro World News

For 20 years, Miguel Caballero has been working in the body armour industry — a profession he began while working on a project as a business administration student in his native Colombia. His mother had paid $10 for his first manufactured garment: a comfortable — and safe — leather jacket.

"One of our colleagues didn't have a bodyguard, and didn't wear any body armor as he found it uncomfortable. That sparked my idea to create light, yet protective clothing," Caballero tells Metro.

Caballero, whose business is based in Mexico City, says that the United States is his main client.

In the wake of recent school attacks in the U.S., Caballero reworked his safety apparel for adults to cater to schoolchildren: He offers bulletproof T-shirts, vests and backpacks, many of which at first glance resemble everyday clothes.

Caballero said in Mexico people have forged many of his products, resulting in what he called shoddy knock-offs.

"Many have tried to copy us, (and they) get falsified certifications. They are putting human lives at risk by getting to do what they cannot do."

Caballero's clients include state governors, local police, military and corporate professionals — but there has been criticism over allegations that his bulletproof products were used by criminals.

"I do not know of any unauthorized third party that may have gotten their hands on our products," Caballero said, adding that he has a background check done on his clients and only sells products to those without a criminal record.

Caballero's website, miguelcaballero.com, sells to clients in 23 countries.

His firm has 300 employees. In Latin America, Caballero sells to all countries, while in Europe to only four.

In the Middle East his main clients are security-conscious Arab sheiks.

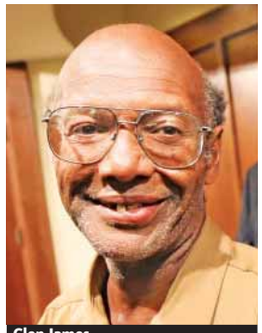
Homeless man's honesty pays off

Big reward for a big heart. More than $91,000 has been donated to a fund for Glen James after he turned in a backpack filled with thousands of dollars



Glen James
STEVEN SENNE/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The overwhelming response to a fund set up for a Boston homeless man who turned in a backpack he found filled with more than $40,000 in cash and traveller's cheques is a "statement to everyone in America," says the Virginia man who started the drive. In just over two days, more than $91,000 has been donated to the fund for Glen James.

James flagged down a police officer Saturday after he found the backpack containing $2,400 in cash and almost $40,000 in traveller's cheques at the South Bay Mall In Boston. The man who lost it told workers at a nearby mall store and they called police, who later returned the backpack to him.

Boston police honoured James with a special citation Monday. After reading media accounts of James' honesty, a stranger, Ethan Whittington of Midlothian, Va., started a fund for James on the crowdfunding site gofundme.com. By early Thursday, $91,855 in donations had been made.

Whittington, a 27-year-old accounts manager for a marketing firm, said he decided to try to raise money for James after reading about his honesty. Now Whittington says he's overwhelmed by the generosity of strangers.

"The fact that he's in the situation he is, being homeless, it blew my mind that he would do this (turn in the backpack)," Whittington said Wednesday.

"It's caught on like wildfire ever since," he said. "It's brought me a lot of hope.... This isn't only about rewarding a great guy. I think it's a statement to everyone in America. If we come together and work toward one thing and work together, then we can make it happen."

Gen Y'ers aid Syrian refugees

Jordan. As their leaders dither over Syria, Western 20-somethings roll up their sleeves to help country's refugees

ELISABETH BRAW
Metro World News

Dina El-Kassaby, 22, from Canada, on those living in Zaatari: "There's a stereotype that refugees are lazy. But the refugees here are nurses, teachers, lawyers and truck drivers. Almost everyone I talk to asks about work opportunities." ELISABETH BRAW/METRO WORLD NEWS

Every morning, Dina El-Kassaby heads to the refugee camp in Zaatari, Jordan. The enormous site, located seven kilometres across the Syrian border, requires an enormous staff. It has quickly grown from nothing to housing some 150,000 Syrian refugees in one year. And they have nowhere to go.

El-Kassaby, a 22-year-old from Vancouver, is one of the surprising number of young Westerners who have opted to work there.

"There's a stereotype that refugees are lazy," she says. "That's false as far as Syrians are concerned. There are nurses, teachers, lawyers and truck drivers here. Almost everyone I talk to asks about work opportunities. Women are well educated too."

Down Zaatari's main thoroughfare, refugees have set up myriad unofficial shops, selling everything from shampoo to wedding dresses. They call the dusty patch the "Champs Elysees."

Perhaps it's this civilized aspect of the Syrian conflict that inspires young Westerners to help: After all, until a year ago the refugees lived middle-class lives not unlike ours. Or perhaps it's the recognition that we could find ourselves in the same situation. Or is it shame over the fact that 100,000 Syrians have been killed, more than 4.2 million people are displaced within Syria and two million have fled to other countries, while the West dithers over a course of action?

David Lampert, an 18-year-old from Vermont, asked his online Arabic teacher how to volunteer in Jordan, and travelled to the town of Mafraq near Jordan's border with Syria. "I just wanted to help the Syrian people," he explains as I meet him at the local church.

Mafraq, a town of 60,000, now houses some 20,000 Syrian refugees. The church, supported by Mercy Corps, an NGO, provides necessities like food and blankets to newly arrived families, as well as a safe space for children and parents to rest.

Canadian Haitham Betts, 23, also helps out at the church, doing odd jobs and simply spending time with the new arrivals. "Helping people when they're in a crisis situation is so important to them on a personal level," he says.

Of the UN World Food Programme's staff of 80 in Jordan, 33 are aged 35 or younger — nine of them Westerners. Mercy Corps reports that 80 per cent of its volunteers are 35 and under.

Of course, this hugely complex and fast-moving refugee crisis isn't managed by 20-somethings. "It's important to remember that the people in charge are officials with long-time emergency experience," notes Marc Vergara, UNICEF's Head of Communications in Jordan.

And local Jordanian staff carry out a wide range of tasks, from delivering food to mounting tents. But the young Westerners are right here on the ground, providing a crucial service to thousands of desperate people.

"I want people at home to understand the horrific levels of violence going on in Syria, and how terribly difficult it is to pack up and leave," Aoife McConnell, a 27-year-old UN Refugee Agency worker from Ireland, tells me when I meet her in Mafraq.

David Lampert, left, 18, from Vermont, and Haitham Betts, right, 23, from Canada, help Pastor Sahawneh Nour at the Mafraq church. ELISABETH BRAW/METRO WORLD NEWS

Aoife McConnell, 27, from Ireland: "It's really tough to get the message out." ELISABETH BRAW/METRO WORLD NEWS

"It's really tough to get the message out," McConnell adds. "The reality in the world is, how can we ask people who're worried about their own economy to give money to Syrian refugees?

"But consider this: Every night when you go to bed, another 1,000 Syrians have made the heart-wrenching decision to leave and are crossing over the border to Jordan."

How to become an aid worker

- Adapt & help. You have to be willing to adapt to new living conditions. And of course you have to be willing to help. You're not a colonial manager.
- Job surplus. With many aid workers returning home after several years or just several months, there's plenty of turnover. That means lots of job openings.
- Job site. Visit reliefweb.int, which lists virtually every aid worker opening, from a communications internship at the UN Refugee Agency to multi-year postings for managers. You can search by level of work experience (hundreds of jobs are available for those with 0-3 years' experience), country and area of work. The site tells you how to apply.
- Email. As UN Refugee Agency worker Aoife McConnell did, you can also send your resumé to NGOs. For the UN World Food Program, for example, email jordan.recruitment@wfp.org.
- Pay. NGOs typically pay a monthly salary, and a good one for the standards of the respective country. The employer often provides housing and trips back to one's home country.

Getting by at a camp hospital. With a little help from Italian friends

Above the thousands of sand-coloured tents in Zaatari flies an Italian flag. It's the Italian hospital: Seven doctors, 10 nurses and one dentist work in the modest building.

"We have around 700 patients per week," Dr. Basham Anakrih, a Jordanian surgeon, tells me as I visit.

As we speak, a man in a wheelchair is brought in by his son; he hands Anakrih a prescription that needs to be signed. The young doctor asks him a few questions and signs the form. Meanwhile, in another surgical room — closed only by a curtain — a colleague of Anakrih circumcises a baby boy.

Though the hospital is small — the camp's French and Moroccan hospitals have beds — it performs a crucial service to the Zaatari camp.

"All equipment is paid for by Italy," explains Anakrih as he proudly shows me the hospital's incubator and X-ray machine.

Jordan provides the hospital staff.

Analysis

"Now is a good time to get in there"

MARC VERGARA, DIRECTOR OF COMMUNICATIONS, UNICEF, JORDAN

Syria and the region are Level 3 (the highest UN emergency level). That means that UN agencies worldwide are asked to supply staff, because they need people with experience in emergencies or technical skills like water and sanitation. UNICEF usually has 15 people in Jordan — now we're at 50.

The UN will make many of the staff assisting Syrian refugees permanent. Right now we're planning for the next two to three years. Of course we can only guess how many refugees will cross the border to Jordan, but our estimate is that we'll have one million refugees here next year.

Both the UN and the NGOs are looking for people with the skills I mentioned, so now is a good time to try to get in if you have the expertise. In addition to full-time staff, the UN and NGOs also have staff on a consulting basis.

Ford's Oakville plant boost raises hope of more jobs

Auto industry rebound. Feds, province also kick in funds toward $700M investment in facility

Ford's investment in the Oakville plant west of Toronto is creating hope among union members and industry watchers that more jobs may come to Canada as demand for cars rebounds to pre-recession levels.

The automaker announced Thursday it was putting $700 million in the plan with the help of government funds in a move it called a "win for everyone" as well as a sign of the company's dedication to Canadian manufacturing.

"Today's announcement is significant for Ford because it's about solidifying jobs and about becoming more competitive than ever before right here in Canada," Ford president for the Americas, Joe Hinrichs, said during a news conference in Oakville.

Quoted

"So far, job creation has certainly lagged behind the regrowth of the North American auto industry."

Anthony Faria, an automotive expert at the University of Windsor

"Not only is this investment helping us to find much-needed capacity for global product and securing these great jobs, it's also positioning Oakville as one of the more competitive and important manufacturing facilities in the Ford global manufacturing system."

While the investment doesn't create any new jobs, it will secure those of the 2,800 employees currently at the plant.

Anthony Faria, an automotive expert at the University of Windsor, said Ford's level of investment means those jobs should remain safe for at least 10 years, but that new product would have to come into the factory for new positions to be created since the vehicles currently built at Oakville aren't big sellers.

The plant now makes the Ford Edge, Ford Flex, Lincoln MKX and Lincoln MKT. Ford says several new models will be brought to the plant to meet demand in North America and elsewhere. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Broadcast. MasterChef Canada announces judges

Three high-profile chefs were bursting with excitement during their first day on the set as judges for the new TV show MasterChef Canada.

Restaurateurs Michael Bonacini, Claudio Aprile and Alvin Leung will put home-chef contestants through their paces in the Canadian version of the Gordon Ramsay hit, expected to debut on CTV in the winter of 2014, the network announced Thursday.

"It was incredible. It was lightning in a bottle," Claudio Aprile, the owner and creative force behind the Orderfire Restaurant Group, which includes Toronto's Origin brand restaurants, said during a break on Monday. "The best part was finally just getting on camera, getting into wardrobe and really becoming part of this incredible experience."

CTV put out a call for auditions in June and thousands of home cooks vied to be on the show. It will be up to the trio of judges to put the contestants through individual and team-based cooking challenges.

1 Cop-foolery. A North Vancouver RCMP officer was fined this week for an incident that occurred last February when he was clocked, while off-duty, driving at such high speeds that West Vancouver police were called in to assist. Const. Michael Milo Arbulic eventually stopped and revealed he was merely playing a prank on fellow police officers, reinforcing what some of us already know: Cops are hilarious!

2 Star gazing. A paper published in Monthly Notices of the Royal Astronomical Society revealed a star from which a magnetically driven jet is creating a fascinating planetary nebula. The most surprising thing about this is the existence of a publication called Monthly Notices of the Royal Astronomical Society.

3 Designer genes. Next month, the U.S. Food and Drug Administration will hold a two-day public meeting to discuss genetic modification of the human egg. The conversation will revolve around "oocyte modification" involving material from a second woman, enabling offspring to carry DNA from three parents. As usual, this probably started somewhere with one guy trying to convince two women to have sex with him at the same time.

4 Parental misguidance. A study released by Safe Kids Worldwide showed that one in four parents have driven with children improperly secured in their car seats. Another two out of four have just thought about it.

5 In-line gaming. Consumers lined up overnight for a copy of the long-awaited Grand Theft Auto V. Tensions mounted as gamers grew anxious over spending so many hours in queue, which would have otherwise been spent playing Grand Theft Auto IV.

6 Bust-a-cap-puccino. Starbucks is asking customers not to bring guns into its shops. Not an outright ban, but a friendly request that makes sense in a store where people wait in long lines to load up on overpriced, caffeinated beverages that require a glossary to order. "Give me my grande, non-fat, double-caf, extra-foamy mochalacachino now!"

7 Beavertails. Foodies are apparently using an exotic vanilla-like flavouring found among the anal secretions of beavers. This is huge news for people who would rather hunt down a nocturnal, semi-aquatic rodent and negotiate entry into its holiest of holies to achieve that almost-vanilla taste, than to just buy vanilla in a store.

8 This week in music. In 1983, Kiss was on MTV to promote the release of Lick It Up, where they appeared sans make-up for the first time. Thousands of women seeing the real Gene Simmons leapt to their feet shouting, "That's who I slept with?"

9 America got tricked. Kenichi, the winner of America's Got Talent, gets a chance to headline his own show in Las Vegas and a prize of $1 million ... over the next 40 years! That's right. For those who don't read the fine-print disclaimer, that's $25,000 a year, or a job washing restrooms at Denny's without a raise for the rest of your life. Thanks, AGT. They couldn't have done that without you.

Jewel-encrusted skeletons discovered

A relic hunter has lifted the lid on a macabre collection of 400-year-old jewel-encrusted skeletons unearthed in churches across Europe. Art historian Paul Koudounaris has hunted down and photographed dozens of gruesome skeletons in some of the world's most secretive religious establishments.

This decorated skeleton of the martyr Valerius, pictured, was discovered in the Roman Catacombs and transferred in the 18th century to the Church of Saint Peter and Paul in Weyarn, southeast Germany.

"Weyarn has only one jewelled full-skeleton relic, but when it is this good you really don't need any others," says Koudounaris. METRO

Photographer's viewpoint

"I was writing a book on charnel houses when I came across these skeletons. As I discovered more about them I had this feeling that it was my duty to tell their fascinating story."

Paul Koudounaris, Los Angeles-based art historian

They are just part of the community

Koudounaris underscores how the skeletons had more of a civil duty than a spiritual function.

"They were thought to be miraculous and really solidified people's bond with a town. This reaffirmed the prestige of the town," he said. METRO

Hugh Jackman pulls out claws of a different kind for Prisoners. CONTRIBUTED

Reel Guys

RICHARD CROUSE AND MARK BRESLIN

How far would you go?

Prisoners.
Hugh Jackman shines as a volatile vigilante in this film about fractured families searching for justice

Richard: Mark, Death Wish — the Charles Bronson revenge drama — painted its main character as a vigilante hero, someone who evened the score when the police couldn't. Prisoners isn't as cut and dried. It asks the question, how far would you go to get the information you need to protect your family? As played by Hugh Jackman, Keller Dover is a conflicted man. I think he knows what he's doing is wrong, but doesn't see a choice. Either way, it's going to get audiences talking about the ethics of vigilantism. What did you think?

Mark: There will be a lot of debate about the rougher scenes in this film. But it's a debate that has been in the news all through Jack Bauer's similar dilemma in 24 and the American waterboarding controversy. It probably goes back to Machiavelli and his "ends justifies the means" dictum. But no matter which side you are on this is a gripping thriller that didn't let me go for its full two and a half hour running time.

RC: It is good stuff, but it almost felt like two movies to me. The first hour-and-a-half is a good family drama about a man pushed to extremes after the disappearance of his daughter, while the last hour feels different. I don't want to give anything away, but it becomes more like an episode of Criminal Minds than the first part. I enjoyed both halves, but I preferred the complexity of the family drama.

MB: I guess the long first half gives it the depth so the second half feels more than an episode of Criminal Minds. It requires great acting, which it has, although seeing Hugh Jackman in the lead, I kept expecting him to burst into song in the first half hour. Did you like Paul Dano? Should he send Brad Dourif a cut of his paycheque?

RC: I thought the performances were uniformly strong. We're used to seeing Jackman differently — as a superhero or as a 19th century balladeer — but here he's really volatile and powerful. Dano takes a tough, thankless role and in the little screen time he isn't chained up or worse (no spoilers here!) keeps us wondering about the guilt or innocence of his character.

MB: There are a lot of plot twists in this movie and Dano's character is only one of them. This is the kind of movie you should see with an empty bladder because you won't want to miss any tricks.

In what is a fictional reimagining of his own documentary Planet B-Boy (which he conveniently references throughout), Benson Lee's Battle of the Year tells the story of an American breakdancing "dream team" who compete against odds for the world's title. With predictably formulaic plotting and characters as cardboard as a breakdancer's podium, Battle at least has some amazing dance and choreography. It's just too bad those sequences appear edited together by a speed-freak with a penchant for cutaways.

Has anybody in the movies ever happened upon a large sum of money and gone on to live happily ever after? Things haven't been going well for John Moon (Sam Rockwell). Life goes from crummy to downright miserable when another illegal hunting trip ends with John accidentally shooting a young woman dead. Hugh Hefner may hog the spotlight when it comes to being the sultan of skin mags but director Barry Avrich aims to adjust that thinking with this doc. Filthy Gorgeous charts the ascent of painter turned photographer turned porn mogul Bob Guccione and his raunchier-than-Playboy U.K.-forged nudie bible Penthouse. And while the doc paints a fascinating, lively portrait (with plenty of nudity), Avrich is perhaps too enamored with his subject for an even-keeled investigation. CHRIS ALEXANDER

Fandom makes people do weird things. In Austenland, Jane Hayes (Keri Russell) blows her savings on a Jane Austen "experience" run by Jane Seymour in a bid to meet her own Mr. Darcy. Predictably things don't pan out and Jane finds herself caught in a modern Pride & Prejudice situation, held back by her social status and falling for the wrong guy. It's a clever set up, but writer-director Jerusha Hess can't seem to break out of the rote romantic comedy box. Worse, the jokes fail to yield any laughs.

Doing justice to a Wilde romance

Rush. Olivia Wilde wanted to show the love model Suzy Miller had for James Hunt during their short marriage

NED EHRBAR
Metro World News in Hollywood

Olivia Wilde plays model Suzy Miller in Rush, which opens next Friday. CONTRIBUTED

Olivia Wilde was more than happy to show up for Rush — even if her part only took nine days to film — just to get a chance to be directed by Ron Howard. In the film, Wilde plays Suzy Miller, a high-society fashion model briefly married to Formula 1 driver James Hunt (Chris Hemsworth). Nice work if you can get it.

You don't get a lot of screen time to get this character across.

Yeah, she's there to serve a purpose — I think to show a bit of James Hunt's personal life, which was tumultuous. I loved the way that he charmed Suzy. She wasn't just impressed by his fame or looks, it was the way he approached her with such fearless romanticism. She's a really interesting woman. She remembers James very fondly, which was a big clue for me. I wanted to do justice to the love story that I believe existed between them. She had a great career and certainly didn't marry him for his money. They married out of a spontaneous romantic spirit, and I really wanted that to show. I think in retrospect she really loved him and was glad they had that time together.

You're playing a famous woman who has to deal with a lot of attention from the press and paparazzi, something you do quite well in your own life.

I try. I think maintaining an outsider's perspective of it is important, understanding how odd it is and not letting it feel like a personal attack on you but understanding it as its own bizarre industry — and a necessary evil for certain parts of this job. But the darker side of that, the kind of stalking, is just strange. I think you have to maintain a sense of humour about it or you'll go crazy. I think I get it easier than a lot of other people, so I try not to complain. But there are moments when you're just overwhelmed by it. But who knows? My hope is that with social-networking and Facebook culture everybody's turning themselves into a celebrity, and maybe the complete lack of privacy for everyone will backfire and people won't support the industry that specializes in stalking.

That would be nice.

Yeah, it could happen. It's very weird; I've now developed a sense — I can hear a shutter from a really long distance. It would be wiser for them to have silencers because that's usually how I figure out where they are. It's an interesting thing because if I'm with my sister I'll say, "Wait…" and I can hear it and she can't. I'm like a dog with a whistle; it's pathetic.

What Wilde wants

Wilde says she'd love to get into directing. "I made a short years ago. It was my first foray into it and it kind of gave me confidence to do it again in a bigger way," Wilde says of stepping behind the camera. "It let me know that I've never been happier than when I was on set directing. It just finally felt like I put on shoes that fit. I was determined to do it again, but with the right story that I wrote — it must be a different skill to direct someone else's script. I would like to try that, but I think the next one will be something I write. I'm working on that now."

OUR TAKE ON THE WORLD OF CELEBRITIES

Kate Winslet. ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

Kate Winslet is going to stay Kate Winslet

Despite marrying Ned Rocknroll last year, Kate Winslet won't be taking his name, as she "was never going to change my name to Rocknroll," she tells the Telegraph.

And apparently it has nothing to do with how ridiculous her husband's legally changed name might sound.

Winslet reasons that she didn't change her name when married to Jim Threapleton or Sam Mendes, either.

"I quite like Kate Winslet. In fact I think it's very flashy," she says. "I'm proud of my name because I'm one of three girls and we have one boy in our family so essentially the only person who is going to carry the name along is my brother and he doesn't have any children at the moment."

Winslet, who is already mother to Mia Threapleton, 12, and Joe Mendes, 9, is currently pregnant with her first child with Rocknroll.

Diane Kruger and Joshua Jackson have been together for seven years, making them one of Hollywood's more successful couples. But their first date was so awful, he's lucky he ever got to see her again.

"He thinks he asked me out on a date, which is not true, because I did not agree to that. I agreed to have drinks with him," Kruger said during an appearance on Conan on Tuesday.

Through the power of an eager expression and a clean shirt, Jackson managed to turn drinks into dinner — where, the German beauty says, he talked about himself for an hour and a half, in a restaurant that made her ill.

"It was overgrown with beautiful flowers, to which I had a huge allergic reaction — like really, really bad. I was sneezing and coughing and my eyes were watery."

He took her home in a stinky car his dog had chewed up, and when he went in for the kiss she seriously considered slapping him. All of which answered a burning question I didn't know I had: How much does Joshua Jackson resemble Pacey in real life? Answer: So much!

Lindsay Lohan

Lohan on the straight and narrow

In her post-rehab bid to stay clean, Lindsay Lohan has apparently found the right kind of partner. The troubled starlet is reportedly dating former football player Matt Nordgren, according to Us Weekly.

"He's a great influence on her, and her friends and family love him," a source says. "He's older, a successful businessman and he has been a great friend to her. He's also a Christian and won't drink around her. He's trying to keep her sober and on the straight and narrow. He's really good for her."

James Franco clowns the clowns

James Franco

James Franco doesn't have a problem with gay rumours about him, but he does apparently have a problem with a few gossip websites. So Franco decided to use his Instagram account to poke some fun at the subjects of his ire, posting photos of himself locking lips and holding hands with a mystery man, a shout-out to gossip site Gawker scrawled on it. "Just a Franco afternoon," he wrote.

He also posted photos of himself getting intimate in a car with a mystery woman, name-checking sites Perez Hilton and Just Jared in the process.

If I learned one thing about South Africa when I was touring its Cape vineyards a few years ago, it was that its population is gaga for grilling. They love it so much that the country's national holiday is called National Braai Day.

Sosaties is a South African twist on the Mediterranean kebab that typically skewers lamb, apricots and curry powder. Liquid partners don't come easy. Even if it's deployed lightly, the curry makes this dish a wine pairing challenge.

While an off-dry, white wine made with riesling or chenin blanc will hold up well when your plate throws some heat, sauvignon blanc-led white blends are a less conventional, though equally accommodating, choice.

The Beach House 2012 Sauvignon Blanc Semillon ($9.95 to $11.99) combines bright, citrusy flavours with a soft, tropical undercurrent that makes a great mate for shellfish and the spicy side of Sosaties' personality.

PRICES REFLECT THE RANGE ACROSS THE COUNTRY. SOME PRODUCTS MAY NOT BE AVAILABLE IN ALL PROVINCES.

Braai. The Afrikaans term for barbecue is a custom so prevalent in South Africa that it was given its own holiday. Celebrate on Sept 24.

Canada Braai Day

Two Oceans and Nederburg, the world-class wine brands hailing from South Africa, are joining forces to host Canada Braai Day on Saturday at The Distillery Historic District.

Ingredients

- 50 ml olive or cooking oil
- 2 large onions, both sliced into broad rings
- One green pepper cut into approx. 2.5 cm squares
- 3 tbsp of smooth apricot jam
- 15 ml wine vinegar
- 1 tbsp brown sugar
- 2 crushed bay leaves
- 2 cloves garlic, peeled and crushed
- 1/2 tbsp salt
- 1/2 tsp of pepper
- 1 tsp turmeric
- 1 tbsp curry powder (mild korma to hot madras – the choice is yours)
- 500 g boned leg of lamb, cut into 2.5 cm cubes
- 125 g dried apricots

1. Heat the oil in a frying pan and sauté the onion rings and green pepper blocks until very lightly cooked, making sure the onion rings remain intact. Drain them on absorbent paper.

2. Combine the apricot jam, vinegar, sugar, bay leaves, garlic, salt, pepper, turmeric and curry powder in a ceramic or glass bowl and add the onion rings and green pepper.

3. Add the meat to the mixture and marinate for 24 hours in the fridge, stirring two or three times.

4. If the apricots are not soft, soak them in a little water until plump. You might also want to soak the skewers so that the exposed ends do not burn to charcoal during the cooking process.

5. When you are ready to cook, thread the cubes of meat, apricots, onion rings and peppers onto the skewers. Your barbecue's temperature should be 375 degrees or a medium heat. The recommended cooking time is 6 minutes per side with a half turn at three minutes.

6. Pour the marinade into a saucepan, bring to a boil and keep warm to serve with the sosaties.

1. Heat your potjie (dutch oven) over the barbecue until hot.

2. Add oil, celery, onion, galangal, garlic and lemongrass. Season with salt and pepper. Sweat until onions are transparent. Add lime leaf. Add curry paste and mix with other ingredients.

3. Toss in mussels and white wine and cover potjie. Bring wine to a boil. Add coconut milk and simmer covered. Season with salt and pepper again, checking periodically to see when mussels open. When mussels open remove from heat.

4. Add Thai basil, mint and coriander. Serve in your potjie.

MMA. Champ talks faith, sponsors and beating Gustafsson

A smiling Jon (Bones) Jones walked on to a makeshift stage Thursday to confront underdog challenger Alexander (The Mauler) Gustafsson.

Always thinking of a new angle, Jones was wielding a smartphone in front of him. His view of the square-off would soon be posted on Instagram, the UFC light-heavyweight champion told the media in front of him.

Jones (18-1) took to social media soon after, managing to squeeze a biblical verse, Nike and Gatorade into the same tweet.

"There is nothing special about me, I just work extremely hard," he wrote. "Anything can happen."

A picture below showed a smiling Jones, a Nike swoosh prominent on his hoodie, pointing to a bottle of Gatorade — his latest sponsor. To further make his point, he added Philippians 4:13 and the hashtags for both companies.

Fighter, man of faith and six-foot-four, 205-pound billboard, Jones is currently the brightest star in mixed martial arts.

A victory at UFC 165 Saturday and Jones will set the record for most consecutive title defences (six) in UFC light-heavyweight history. He already holds the record for most submissions (five) by a light-heavyweight and is tied for most finishes (nine).

About the only people who believe Gustafsson can win are those in the challengers' camp.

Gustafsson, a lanky, likable Swede with battered ears, doesn't think he is being disrespected.

"Not at all. I don't take anything personally. I don't read too much. I don't think too much. I'm going to go in there and shock the world on Saturday," he said.

Jones, 26, believes this defence will go the way of all the others.

"I think I have a lot more tools in this fight to win the fight," he said.

The bookies have made Jones anywhere from a 9-1 to 20-1 favourite to beat Gustafsson. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Not impressed

"He's a good puncher, he has pretty good footwork. Not a great boxer."

UFC light-heavyweight champion Jon Jones, who seemed less than impressed by Alexander Gustafsson's striking at Thursday's press conference.

NHL pre-season. New Leaf nets winning goal to take latest game in provincial rivalry

David Bolland scored the winner midway through the third period Thursday night while Mason Raymond chipped in with a goal and an assist as the Toronto Maple Leafs defeated the Ottawa Senators 3-2 in NHL pre-season action.

With his back to the net, Bolland scored on a backhand at 10:25 of the third period to send the Leafs (2-0-1) to victory. Nazem Kadri had the other Toronto goal.

Fredrik Claesson and Andre Petersson replied for the Senators (2-1-0) while Patrick Wiercioch had two assists.

Jonathan Bernier started in goal for the Leafs but was replaced by Drew MacIntyre, who played the final two periods. Both were appearing in their second game of the pre-season.

Craig Anderson made his pre-season debut for the Senators and played the opening two periods for the Senators while Nathan Lawson got into his second game of the pre-season by working the final 20 minutes.

The Senators are off until they visit Toronto's Air Canada Centre for a rematch with the Leafs on Tuesday.

Dodgers pop bottles upon clinching playoff berth

The Los Angeles Dodgers soaked everyone in sight with champagne in the clubhouse. Many players raced back out for a celebratory dip in Arizona's Chase Field swimming pool.

From last place to an NL West title in less than three months, they sure let loose.

Burdened by high expectations and a horrible start, the Dodgers relieved their pent-up pressure with a joyful celebration after becoming the first team this year to clinch a playoff spot. Hanley Ramirez homered twice as they rallied to beat the Arizona Diamondbacks 7-6 on Thursday.

Despite an NL-high payroll of $214 million-plus on opening day, the Dodgers got off to a 30-42 start and were last in the division, 9 1/2 games behind the first-place Diamondbacks, before play on June 22. Los Angeles has gone 58-23 since, including an unreal 42-8 run that coincided mostly with dynamic Cuban defector Yasiel Puig's call-up to the major leagues. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

2016 retirement? Not so fast: Bolt

Quick as can be, Usain Bolt is backtracking on his retirement plans.

Less than three weeks ago, the Olympic champion said he planned to stop sprinting after the 2016 Rio de Janeiro Olympics. But the Jamaican said on Thursday he was looking to extend his career by a year, meaning he could quit after the 2017 world championships in London.

"I am definitely reconsidering," the 27-year-old Bolt said while in London on a book-promotion tour. "I think my fans especially have really voiced their concern about me retiring.

"They think I should carry on and so do my sponsors. I have discussed it with my coach and he says it is possible. We will see what happens but it's on the cards that I will extend it by one more year."

The 2020 Tokyo Olympics are not in his thoughts.

"It's a long way away, but if I win the next Olympics I will have done everything I wanted to do in my career," Bolt said. "So there would be no reason to continue." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NFL. Bills' Super Mario on like Donkey Kong

Super Mario is back, and the New York Jets are well aware.

They've watched the game film. Several times.

Mario Williams was all over the place in a dominant performance in the Buffalo Bills' win over the Carolina Panthers last Sunday. He had a franchise-record 4 1/2 sacks, and looked very much like the game-changing force Buffalo has expected him to be since signing him to a huge deal last year.

"He's one of those dual-type defensive ends who has it all," Jets right tackle Austin Howard said Thursday. "He has speed and can get your edge pretty good with his speed and athleticism, and at the same time, he's really strong, so he can get you really good with a power move."

That's been the book on Williams throughout his career, including his first six NFL seasons with Houston when he made two Pro Bowl teams and was one of the league's most feared defensive players.

"God touched this guy," Jets coach Rex Ryan said. "Like, gave him unbelievable gifts. He's got the height, the size, the length, the arms, the speed. That's kind of what jumps out.

Mario Williams sacks the Panthers' Cam Newton last Sunday. BILL WIPPERT/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

"And he plays hard, he's smart."

Buffalo made him the NFL's first $100-million defensive player before last season, and the expectations skyrocketed. He had 10 1/2 sacks, which wasn't too shabby, but he wasn't as effective as the Bills imagined, and a wrist injury didn't help matters. With a new defensive co-ordinator in Mike Pettine this season, Williams seems to be pretty comfortable.

The AFC East rivals will square off Sunday in East Rutherford, N.J. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Horoscopes

♈ Aries
March 21 - April 20
It'd be smart to keep your opinions to yourself over the next 24 hours, but it's unlikely you will. Maybe it's for the best. Maybe it's time you lay down the law. But make sure you stick to the law too.

♉ Taurus
April 21 - May 21
You're not allowed to fail. At least that's what you tell yourself. The planets say different — they say you're human like everyone else.

♊ Gemini
May 22 - June 21
Mercury, your ruler, is at odds with Pluto, planet of excess, which means you will most likely open your mouth and put both feet in it — again. Just be careful what you say does not cost you some serious money.

♋ Cancer
June 22 - July 23
You want to be totally honest but you fear that if you speak your mind it will be taken as a declaration of war by certain people. What of it? That's their problem, not yours. Speak up.

♌ Leo
July 24 - Aug. 23
There is something that needs to be cut out of your life and if you don't get rid of it now, you may be stuck with it forever. Pluto power will help you to be ruthless today.

♍ Virgo
Aug. 24 - Sept. 23
You may be in the minority as far as certain viewpoints are concerned but according to the planets you are on the side of the angels, so stop worrying about what others might think and do what you know to be right.

♎ Libra
Sept. 24 - Oct. 23
Libra is a cardinal sign, which among other things means you enjoy arguing about controversial issues. Today though, you must make sure that all your facts are just that.

♏ Scorpio
Oct. 24 - Nov. 22
You'll shock people with what you say, and with the forthright way in which you say it. Pluto, your ruler, is moving in your favour again, so chances are you'll get away with it.

♐ Sagittarius
Nov. 23 - Dec. 21
Why are you so scared to make contact with new people? Whatever the reason, get over it because you will meet some interesting characters today — the kind who can open doors and swell your bank balance.

♑ Capricorn
Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
You have every right to express your opinions but don't forget others have a right to disagree with you. Some of the feedback you get today may not be favourable but it will make you think and that's good.

♒ Aquarius
Jan. 21 - Feb. 19
Try not to get bogged down in details. Once you look closely at one thing, you will start looking closely at everything, and there's just no need. You're a "big picture" person, so leave the small stuff to others.

♓ Pisces
Feb. 20 - March 20
Don't waste time explaining to others why you decided on a certain course of action. Either they don't understand or they think it will inconvenience them. SALLY BROMPTON
